Dear Yip:

The day after your check arrived, we had to rush one of the kids to town and the hospital, and in the ensuing commotion, now happily under control, I did not write my thanks as quickly as I should have.

I guess perhaps I shall never be able to express them adequately, for when things go badly and friends step forward generously and promptly and affectionately---words can't do the job. Nothing can, except to keep up the fight and to win it.

But when the job is done---as I am sure it shall be done---we can sit together in peace and recall old times and how we loved one another and stood firm.

Cleo and I join in telling you and Eddy that we shall never forget what you have done for us.

Affectionately,
